STUDENT PROFILE

Students come to Southern Maine Community College for many different reasons: to earn an associate degree, to start their college career affordably and transfer, to launch a new career, or to build their professional and personal skills. Our students have a broad age range with varied educational backgrounds, and come from across Maine and New England, as well as from other states and overseas. The data in this section looks at all credit students enrolled in the Fall of 2016, including both degree-seeking and non-degree seeking students, unless otherwise noted.

Student Race & Ethnicity

Student Minority Representation

*In calculating the SMCC percentages, it is assumed that the proportions of students whose race/ethnicity is “not recorded” who are white or in a minority group are the same as the proportions of white and minority group students whose race/ethnicity is recorded.

Percentages for Portland, Cumberland County, and Maine were obtained from the 2010 U.S. Census Data. The “White” percentages are percentages described as White and only one race. Each “Minority Group” percentage is calculated as 100% minus the corresponding “White” percentage.

A Brief History of SMCC

Southern Maine Community College (SMCC) has grown and evolved over the years, but our mission remains unchanged: to empower students to respond to a changing world and to enhance economic and cultural development in Maine.

Our mission is as vital today as it was in 1946, when the College first opened under the name Maine Vocational Technical Institute (MVTI), a day school in Augusta created to serve returning World War II veterans who needed to learn new skills in a post-war economy. By 1952 MVTI and its 156 students had outgrown their space in Augusta and moved to the site of decommissioned Fort Preble, overlooking beautiful Casco Bay in South Portland. During the 1960s the name was changed to Southern Maine Vocational Technical Institute (SMVTI) and authorization was received to award Associate in Applied Science degrees.

In the late 1980s, the Maine Legislature changed the name of the state's Vocational Technical Institute System to the Maine Technical College System, and SMVTI became Southern Maine Technical College (SMTC). Almost a decade later, in 1998, the College added an Associate in Arts degree in liberal studies to its offerings, a significant step in its evolution to a comprehensive community college.

In 2003 that transformation was complete. Gov. John Baldacci introduced legislation establishing the Maine Community College System – a move that enjoyed strong bipartisan support in the 121st Maine Legislature. The College name was changed once more, this time to Southern Maine Community College.

In 2011, SMCC expanded its effort to provide access to high quality, affordable education by opening a second campus at Brunswick Landing, home of the former Brunswick Naval Air Station. SMCC's Midcoast Campus in Brunswick offers students access to state-of-the-art classrooms and laboratories that support studies in engineering, composites, health care, business, arts and sciences and more.

Today, SMCC students come from across the state and around the globe. Whether they are seeking a degree in the trades and technologies that keep our economy humming, or the arts and sciences that offer a strong and broad educational foundation, SMCC graduates are successful employees, employers and entrepreneurs. Through more than 60 transfer agreements with colleges and universities in Maine and around the country, our students are able to continue their studies in four-year degree programs.

SMCC has come a long way from a small school in Augusta to Maine's largest community college. In the fall of 2016, we served nearly 6,000 students and offered more than 40 degree programs at our campuses in South Portland and Brunswick, satellite community centers, and online. At every step in SMCC's transformation, our College has responded to the changing world and enhanced economic and cultural development for our students and our state.
